SKYLIGHTS FOR DAYLIGHT HARVESTING

PAEL is passionate about energy conservation and green initiatives and 'daylight harvesting' is one such idea for use at infrastructure and industrial installations. We at PAEL supply and install Skylights to infrastructure and industrial installations. These Skylights help reduce the dependence on artificial illumination by harvesting the Sun's light and using it to illuminate interiors of buildings, commercial and residential, infrastructure like airport terminals, railway stations, industrial complexes, etc, thereby reducing power consumption and helping with energy conservation. These lights are a superior alternative to conventional polycarbonate sheets being used in roofs which tend to crack and turn yellow while our Skylights are protected from such elements by special materials and coatings. The image features a light gray background. In the top left corner, there is a grid of small, light blue dots. At the top center, a dark blue rounded rectangle contains the word "NOTES" in white, bold, uppercase letters. To the right of this header, there are several diagonal stripes in shades of blue and orange. Below the header, the page is divided into three main sections. On the left, a large white rectangular area is outlined in orange and contains horizontal dotted lines for writing. On the right side, there are three stacked, slightly overlapping rectangular notes. The top note is yellow, the middle one is light purple, and the bottom one is light blue. Each note has a small, dark blue tab at the top left and a small black star icon in the top right corner.

This image shows a full page of primary-ruled paper. It features multiple sets of horizontal lines designed to help young learners write neatly. Each set consists of three lines: a solid top line, a dashed middle line, and a solid bottom line. These sets are repeated down the entire page, providing ample space for handwriting practice. The paper has a clean white background with no other markings or text.[illegible][illegible]
